

Selleria stainless steel case, $750, and straps, $125 each, at Fendi, Beverly Hills.

Tick-Change Artist

Finally, there's a watch that can keep up with fashion's ficklest devotees. Fendi's new Selleria makes it easy to follow fall's many trends. Want to go from classic femininity to urban warrior in a flash? Push the button near the crown to open the bezel and swap straps. Choose from the traditional round or new tonneau-shaped cases in either stainless steel or solid 18K gold and steel accented with diamonds, then pick from a stainless steel bracelet or one of 19 lizard and calfskin straps. In a nod to the Rome fashion house's legacy, the faces are framed by a saddle stitch detail that recalls Fendi's original Selleria collection of leather goods, which dates to the 1920s. After all, trends may change, but the best things in fashion are the ones that endure. —Laurie Kable

Vhernier glams up chalcedony by edging it in pavé diamonds. Ivanka Trump puts glass-like rock crystal on ice. And at Mathon Paris, mystical moonstones bring the cool. —L.K.
